The Atká Lakota Museum sits on the banks of the Missouri River in the heart of Chamberlain, South Dakota, a small town known for rolling hills, walleye fishing and Native roots. A stroll through the museum is a walk through the Lakota tribe’s timeline, from their original settling on the Great Plains to their forced relocation to reservation camps. Here are five exhibits you need to see.
THE TIPI

Did you know that a tipi isn’t a symmetrical cone? It is actually slightly tilted to the rear for more headroom and better ventilation. The tilt braces the front of the tipi from the nastiest of prairie winds. The Aktá Lakota Museum has a massive tipi exhibit and knowledgeable experts with more interesting facts about this iconic Native American structure.

THE GIFT

The Gift is a brand new exhibit that opened in June 2021 and is based on the traditional Lakotan narrative of White Buffalo Woman and the sacred pipe gifted to Itazipco Oyate, one of the seven oyates of the Oceti Sakowin. The exhibit centers on seven of the Lakota’s sacred ceremonies, called “gifts.” The foretold gifts are interpreted by an artwork, poem and song. Each one is created by a Lakota artist, poet or musician and presented alongside the coinciding text from the narrative. Learn More!
Story Time with Uŋčí and Lalá is a free public program that brings American Indian history to life through Native American literature. This program is primarily for children, but all are welcome.

Readings are held every week in June and July on Tuesdays in the museum from 10:30-11:30 A.M. with new stories and activities every week. Learn More!
LAKOTA BUFFALO DAYS — TOM PHILLIPS

Lakota Buffalo Days is a large diorama painted by Tom Phillips, Chickasaw. Phillips dedicated his life to recording and recreating the authentic history of Native Americans through art and sculpture. This diorama is incredibly detailed and features a scene showing the Lakota herding buffalo in the Black Hills. The diorama also includes real props from the epic film Dances with Wolves. THE BIRCHBARK CANOE

Along with our tipi exhibit, the birchbark canoe exhibit is one of our guests’ favorites. On display is a real Santee Sioux birchbark canoe. Canoes like this one played a vital role in hunting and fishing, trading, travel and even served as shelter in circumstances of poor weather.
Over the decades, the museum’s collective memory has provided exceptional research, exhibit and educational services to the students of St. Joseph’s Indian School and all those interested in learning more about the rich culture and heritage of the Northern Plains Indian people. To commemorate the milestone anniversary we are sharing video tributes that will lead visitors on a journey through the moments in the evolution of the Museum, our collection and educational programs. LAKOTA MOON CALENDAR

During the summer, the Blokétu moons, the camp circle followed the migrating buffalo and moved often. Women worked to maintain the camp and were responsible for transporting and unpacking the family’s belongings; they also prepared food and made and set up tipis. Girls helped gather firewood and water and received instruction in quillwork decoration. Boys practiced their hunting skills on small animals. Men made weapons, hunted for game and defended the camp. Summer was also a time of celebrations and ceremonies. Learn More!

Blokétu — The Warm Moons (Summer)
Wipazuka Wasté Win — Moon of the June Berries
Canpásapa Wi — Moon When the Chokecherries Are Ripe
Wasúton Wi — Moon of the Harvest

American Indians treasured nature and earth. The people’s close connection to nature is seen in their calendars. Based on the moon cycles, the American Indian year was divided in to 13 moons with each moon being 28 days long.
